The first part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the various methods which have been proposed for the determination of the rate of reaction between a radical and a molecule. It is shown that the most reliable method is the one proposed by Kistiakowski and co-workers, which is based on the measurement of the rate of reaction between a radical and a molecule in the presence of a known concentration of a third body. This method is applicable to the determination of the rate of reaction between a radical and a molecule in the gas phase, and it is the only method which is applicable to the determination of the rate of reaction between a radical and a molecule in the liquid phase. The results of the measurements of the rate of reaction between a radical and a molecule in the gas phase are shown in Table I, and the results of the measurements of the rate of reaction between a radical and a molecule in the liquid phase are shown in Table II.

The rate of reaction between a radical and a molecule in the gas phase is given by the equation
